

DIVORCE LAWS VARY IN EUROPE

Roman Marriage of Former U. S. Senator Throws Light on Matter

PARIS, April 1.—How often has a man, seated in a barber's chair, for a shave and a haircut, concluded that he might as well save time by having a manicure and a shave also? There is even the story of the man obliged to spend a month in a hospital with a broken leg, who took advantage of the opportunity to have his appendix, tonsils and adenoids removed.

Why is it, therefore, that an American tourist should reflect, that in Paris, here I am in Bulgaria, I might as well get that little divorce I have been thinking about so long, but never had time to arrange? At any rate, the Bulgarian divorce and the Roman marriage of former Senator Henry F. Hollis, of New Hampshire, has caused a stir in all of the American colonies in Europe.

European divorce laws have become quite lax with those Americans whose pocketbooks permit of temporary residence over here.

MANY GET DIVORCES
Many have obtained divorces here in Paris in recent years, chiefly because of the advantage of a complete absence of publicity. It is a criminal offense in France to publish or divulge the testimony or grounds of a divorce proceeding.

The hearings are secret and only the bare result is announced. On the other hand, both parties must be residents of France, and have full opportunity to appear and make defense.

In contradiction to the English practice which makes divorce practically impossible when both parties desire it, France considers that the fact that both parties want it is the best reason for granting a divorce. But if the suit is defended it is difficult to get a decree.

EASY IN GERMANY

Divorce is easier for foreigners in Germany, at least for the men, for the German courts can pronounce a decree only when the husbands reside within jurisdiction, since a husband's residence is assumed to be his wife's also. Thus an American husband by acquiring a residence in Germany can obtain a divorce not only for infidelity, but for any conduct which destroys happiness. Divorce does not exist in Italy, but Italy prospers from the divorces of other countries. It is the ideal spot for a honeymoon after remarriage.

OVERWORK BREAKS DOWN CARNEGIE'S SON-IN-LAW

INSIDE STORY OF WHY HE DECLINED TEMPTING OFFERS

Rejects Alluring Business Proposals to Teach at $2000 A Year

Mr. and Mrs. Roswell Miller, and the Carnegie Mansion in New York. The Millers Now Are Dwelling in a $250,000 Home, but Expect Shortly to Move Back With Mrs. Andrew Carnegie Into This Famous New York Show Place.

By NEA Service.

NEW YORK.—Andrew Carnegie's son-in-law is sick from overwork. Roswell Miller, who shares the advantages of the late ironmaster's millions with his wife, Carnegie's only daughter, has taken a $2000-a-year job so seriously that he broke down under the strain, finally being stricken with influenza. Now he is at Palm Beach, Fla., with his wife, recuperating and hopes soon to be back at work.

Miller's job is instructing New York university students in the mysteries of mechanical drawing and internal combustion engines. Besides his work in the classroom he assists in laboratory experiments.

MILLER'S MOTIVES.
More interesting than Miller's choice of his vocation is the inside reason of motives that dictated his decision.

Immediately after his marriage to the girl who was one of the world's heiresses despite the ambition of her father to give away all his wealth for philanthropic purposes before his death, Miller was offered several opportunities for a business career.

Charles Schwab, J. Pierpont Morgan and other captains of industry and finance invited him to associate himself with them. But Miller, according to close friends, took this attitude:

"These offers are generous and well meant, but they never were made to Roswell Miller, before his marriage to Margaret Carnegie, and therefore I must believe they would not be made to him now if it were not for this marriage."

FUTURE EMBARRASSMENT.
"If I were to enter into such associations, the time inevitably would come when I would be embarrassed by passing in some manner on my wife's investments, through influence, advice or otherwise."

"I never was a fortune hunter. I married Miss Carnegie for love, not for money. Her father with his great foresight placed sufficient safeguards around his daughter's inheritance. And I am content to be my wife's husband, without being her business manager."

TEACHING AMBITION.
Besides his lifelong ambition has been to teach.

"Teaching," he has said, "is one of the greatest services a man can perform. Mr. Carnegie was a great organizer of industry, a great philanthropist, but his greatest work was in the teaching he did indirectly through the establishment of libraries and directly through his own writings."

So he applied for a position at New York university.

No title goes with the job. He has a flat-top desk in the room of a professor. Each morning he drives to work in a roadster from the $250,000 mansion off Fifth avenue, in which the Millers and Mrs. Carnegie live.

STUDENTS LIKE HIM.
"He's a humdinger," says one of his students. "When we see him coming along, we pile on the running board of his car, and he's glad to give us a lift. He's surely popular with all the fellows."

Miller is not much older than some of his students, being 27. He is the son of the late president of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, who left $700,000 to his wife and three children.

The war interrupted his studies at Princeton. He served in the ambulance service in France and later as an ensign in the navy. After the war he resumed his studies, receiving his degree last June.

ARMENIANS LEFT TO FATE UNDER TERMS OF NEAR EAST SETTLEMENT

Christian Minorities Again Left to Tender Mercies of Turk, British Parliament Leader Declares in Article.

By GEORGE N. BARNES,
British Parliament Leader.
(Copyright, 1922, by the Standard-Examiner.)

LONDON, April 1.—Humiliating in the extreme is the agreed upon settlement in the Near East. There is little doubt that it will be accepted. The allied powers have authority to impose their will upon the Greeks. The Turks, having the better of the arrangement, will of course, accept.

The return to London of Lord Curzon from the Paris conference of the allied foreign ministers has been greeted with enthusiasm. The agreed upon document which has to be put forward as the basis for restoration of peace in the Near East is far from satisfactory. The conference, however, was faced with complications directly arising out of the failure of the military operations of the Greeks in Asia Minor. This forced a compromise settlement. Assent of the allied governments to the plan of their ministers will follow as a matter of course.

The best thing that now can happen is for the conclusions to be adopted as soon as possible. They are antithetical to the great hopes that had been entertained of a Near East settlement of quite a different kind.

The complete text of the agreement now is fully known in America. It leaves the Armenians to their fate, subject only to the proviso, which is a mere pretense, that they are under the protection of the league of nations. The Turks know and the Paris delegates know, that the league of nations has no forces to protect anybody.

This unsatisfactory agreement is proof of the outcome of muddling of Near East problems by the allied and associated governments. Through the division of opinions of the governments that are opposed to him, the Turk has escaped the just wrath of mankind.

To us in Great Britain the proposals are disappointing because tens of thousands of the very best of our men were sacrificed in wrestling from the Turks the lands which were blighted by his terrible rule.

We believed that the United States could be relied upon in due course to lend a hand in dealing with the Turk. We had in our minds the words of President Wilson: "What Christian minorities never again would be left to the tender mercies of the Turk."

We had hoped that the president spoke the mind of his fellow countrymen. Then came the treaty of Sevres with its evasion by the Turkish government. After that followed the Greek reverses. But last, and worst, has come the attitude of France. That country has made a common cause with the common enemy. Contrary to its written obligation it has made a separate agreement with the Turks at Ankara leaving the Armenians in Silecia to shift for themselves and the Frenchmen now have maneuvered the Turk again into power over the non-Turk population.

It is a sorry tale, and it makes one shudder at the outcome of international co-operation.

Sage Tea Darkens Hair to any Shade

WHEN you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preserving its texture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost, you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, and look years younger.

GENOA INVITATION TICKLES BOLSHEVIK

MOSCOW, April 1.—A little girl who had been snubbed by all her neighbors for years and then suddenly received an invitation to a party at the home of the rich little girl on the hill could hardly display more excitement than the Russian Bolshevik government has over its invitation to the Genoa conference.

They now feel they are in the social swim of nations and thus entitled to make faces at representatives of former Russian regimes who refused to play with them.

Unless, for reasons of policy which do not at present seem likely to be invoked, the soviet delegation to Genoa should decide to appear there in the garb of the proletariat, the Bolshevik representatives will be sartorially as immaculate as any others attending the conference. They are going to be well dressed at their first party.

IRISH WILL FOUND NATIONAL ACADEMY

DUBLIN, April 1.—The Royal Irish academy, Ireland's oldest center of learning, is now to have a rival. It has long been famous, especially in its contributions to science. However, it has mainly looked to England rather than to Ireland or other countries for its models and inspiration and, in the fight with the British it expelled Professor John MacNeill, speaker of the Dail Eireann and a distinguished Irish historian, in consequence of his political activities.

The new academy is to be thoroughly national and, in addition to its scientific work, aims at securing for the Irish language, literature, and history their primacy of influence and inspiration at home and for all Irish work and research an extended measure of appreciation among the learned academies of Europe and America.
